Country Specific Notes

Global:

Individual tax rules/entitlements are different per country and could result in tax deductions on monthly payslips. Allianz does not have visibility into country specific tax rules. Employees should seek a tax specialist for further information.

Australia:

Australia does not recognize Allianz as a local plan and therefore, if you are covered under Allianz health insurance, you may be subject to Lifetime Health Cover (LHC) loading. LHC loading is a government-imposed penalty that applies to individuals who do not maintain continuous private hospital cover after the age of 31 which may lead to higher premiums in the future.

If you wish to avoid these additional charges, you may consider obtaining personal hospital coverage instead.

Bulgaria:

Payroll deductions require a wet ink signature from the employee. If the employee adds dependents, clients must cover the cost of dependents until the signature is obtained.

Netherlands:

Offering Allianz is considered a top up plan only and does not satisfy the national insurance requirements.
